Crne Gore

U svojoj više od jednog milenijuma dugoj istoriji državnosti, Crna Gora je razvijala i održavala veze sa drugim državama, kako u njenom okruženju tako i šire. O tim odnosima ostala su brojna svjedočanstva tokom vjekova, koja govore o njihovom intenzitetu i prirodi. Dio tih svjedočanstava su i dokumenta koja se odnose na uspostavljanje i razvoj počasne konzularne službe u Knjaževini i Kraljevini Crnoj Gori. Iz tog razloga, Državni arhiv Crne Gore je uvidio potrebu da, kroz izložbu kao naučno-popularnu formu, naučnoj i laičkoj javnosti predstavi dio građe iz svojih fondova.

Istorijska diplomatička politika jedne zemlje činila je fundament istraživanja i opisivanja njene istorije. Tek u novije doba istorijska nauka u svojim proučavanjima stavlja akcenat na kulturna i društvena pitanja. To, naravno, ne znači da su izučavanja diplomatske istorije napuštena i da još uvijek ne mogu pobuditi pažnju naučne, a posebno laičke javnosti. Ova važna tema stalno će biti u vrhu interesovanja istoričara i drugih proučavalaca prošlosti, međutim istraživanja i dobijene rezultate treba prilagoditi savremenom čitaocu i njegovim poimanjima prošlosti.

Kao i svugdje istorija diplomatičke politike Crne Gore bile su u žiži interesovanja nacionalne istoriografije. U tom smislu ponekad je nemoguće razdvojiti opštu od diplomatske istorije.¹ Zato su brojni autori i djela koji su se bavili spoljnom politikom Crne Gore. Proučavanja diplomatske istorije, kroz razne periode naše prošlosti, pokazala su da je ovo veoma značajno pitanje ujedno i jako komplikovano. Kroz različite epohe svog postojanja Crna Gora je mijenjala svoje granice, državne okvire i susrijetala se sa mnogim susjedima. Zajedno sa tim mijenjali su se priroda i zadaci njene spoljne politike. Ipak, u svim tim periodima, kao jedinstveni i primarni cilj crnogorske diplomatičke politike, nametao se zadatak očuvanja državne i narodne samosvojnosti i samobitnosti, kao izraz opšte politike.

Tokom vremena i u zavisnosti od državno-pravnog i međunarodnog položaja Crne Gore mijenjali su se i nosioci i sprovodioci njene spoljne politike. U početku, to su bili vladari Duklje i Zete ili njihovi predstavnici koji su održavali veze sa stranim dvorovima. Značajne diplomatske veze crnogorski kneževi, kraljevi i gospodari, tokom srednjeg vijeka, ostvarivali su putem sklapanja brakova sa vladajućim dinastijama drugih država i porodicama uglednih velikaša. Time je crnogorska država i njena vladajuća kuća podizala svoj ugled i značaj na međunarodnoj sceni. Cilj te diplomatičke politike bio je da se Duklja ili Zeta osnaži i čvrsto pozicionira na mapi Evrope toga doba. Padom naše srednjovjekovne države, crnogorski narod se našao u poziciji da brani svoju slobodu u viševjekovnoj borbi sa Osmanskim carstvom, teritorijalno ograničen na četiri nahiye koje sačinjavaju Staru Crnu

Goru i okolna Brda. Crnogorski opštenarodni zbor kao jedini organ plemenske vlasti, održavao je kontakte i diplomatske veze sa drugim državama, najviše sa Venecijom, italijanskim državama i Habzburškom monarhijom, kako bi se pozicionirao i predstavio kao nezaobilazan faktor u borbi sa Otomanskom imperijom. Tako u prvoj polovini XVII vijeka bilježimo i slučaj crnogorske delegacije na španskom dvoru sa ciljem ugovaranja savezničkih odnosa.²

Dolaskom na vlast u Crnoj Gori dinastije Petrović Njegoš, krajem XVII vijeka, kreću da jačaju institucije i državotvorna svijest u Crnogoraca. Samim tim jačaju i diplomatske veze sa susjedima i uspostavljaju se bliski odnosi sa Rusijom, koji će biti okosnica crnogorske spoljne politike u narednom periodu. Sve vladike iz dinastije Petrović, od vladike Danila do Petra II, biće čvrsto vezane za Rusiju, kao zaštitnika crnogorske samostalnosti i pokrovitelja njenih organa vlasti. Pored toga, Crna Gora je, u cilju očuvanja svoje uslovne nezavisnosti, održavala diplomatske veze i sa okolnim turskim feudalcima i sa Mletačkom republikom i Austrijom. Tako uspostavljene diplomatske veze, današnja istorijska nauka, označila je kao ad hoc diplomatičku, jer u to doba u Crnoj Gori nema zvaničnih organa zaduženih za vođenje spoljne politike.³ Ta vrsta diplomatije sprovodila se povremenim i namjenski upućivanim delegacijama, koje su imale za cilj da pregovaraju sa evropskim dvorovima o konkretnim zadacima i potrebama.

Takvo stanje ostaće sve do dobijanja punog međunarodnog priznanja i obnove suvereniteta na Berlinskom konresu 13. jula 1878. godine. Nakon toga, Crna Gora, kao priznata država, uspostavlja svoje Ministarstvo inostranih djela i uspostavlja legalne diplomatske odnose sa drugim državama. Tako, u periodu od 1878. do 1914 godine, na Cetinju svoja diplomatska predstavništva otvaraju Francuska, Velika Britanija, Rusija, Turska, Austro-Ugarska, Belgija, Srbija, Bugarska, Njemačka, Italija, dok na nerezidentnoj osnovi svog predstavnika imaju SAD. Pored toga, Turska, Italija i Austro-Ugarska su imale i svoja konzularna predstavništva u Podgorici i Baru. Sa svoje strane Crna Gora je teško razvijala sopstvenu diplomatsku mrežu, zbog nedostatka sredstava za njen izdržavanje, ali i odgovarajućih kadrova. Vođena prioritetnim potrebama, Crna Gora otvara svoja poslanstva u Istanbulu i Beogradu, a konzularna predstavništva u Kotoru, Skadru, Rimu, Trstu, a u godinama Prvog svjetskog rata crnogorska vlada u Neiju otvara prvo konzulat u Njujorku, a zatim i poslanstva u Vašingtonu i Parizu. Time kreću začeci moderne crnogorske diplomatije. I u ovom periodu crnogorska diplomacija predstavlja izuzetak. Uvažavajući težak položaj Crne Gore i njena ograničenja, velike sile i druge zemlje su otvorile svoje legacije uprkos narušenom principu reciprociteta između zemalja po kom se uređuje diplomatska služba.

Nedostatak pune i razvijene diplomatske mreže Crna Gora nastoji da nadomjesti uspostavljanjem institucije počasnog konzula. Radi učvršćivanja svog položaja u svijetu i zastupanja svojih ekonomskih i trgovačkih interesa sa nekom zemljom Crna Gora postavlja brojne ugledne ljude u tim državama, često i u više građova, za svoje počasne konzule. Većinom su to bili poslovni ljudi, zastupnici ili članovi trgovačkih kompanija ili pomorski kapetani, a bilježimo i slučajev da tu funkciju obavljaju i ljudi iz svijeta umjetnosti (slikari, vajari, pisci). Njihov zadatak je bio da obavljaju administrativne poslove za potrebe crnogorske vlade, zastupaju crnogorske državljanе u tim zemljama i podnose izvještaje od važnosti za crnogorsku trgovinu ili druga, naročito politička pitanja. U tom smislu Crna Gora ima prilično razgranatu mrežu počasnih konzula i njeni interesi su zastupljeni u skoro svim velikim trgovачkim centrima u svijetu tog doba. Od 1886. godine, kada se imenuju prvi počasni konzuli u Bariju, Napulju i Kataniji, ova mreža će se stalno nadogradivati do 1914. godine osnivanjem novih konzulata. Zato će Crna Gora imati zastupnike svojih interesa na četiri kontinenta, sem Azije i Australije, a ukupno u 42 grada. Najviše počasnih konzula Crna Gora je imenovala u Italiji, ukupno 12 i to u Rimu, Bariju, Milanu, Torinu, Đenovi, Napulju, Kataniji, Veneciji, Brindiziju, Bolonji, Masa Karari, Bordigeri i Palermu.

Ovo govori o velikoj trgovinskoj i drugoj povezanosti između dvije zemlje.

Koliko je u drugim odnosima Crna Gora bila vezana za Rusiju, u sferi diplomatiјe bila je dominantno oslonjena na Italiju. Italijanski konzul zastupa crnogorske interese na Madagaskaru, a Italijani su i crnogorski konzuli u Rio de Ženeiru, Baiji i San Sebastijanu. Prema razgranatosti konzularne mreže, poslije Italije, Crna Gora najveću ima u Francuskoj (Pariz, Marsej, Bordo, Avr i Nica), pa u Velikoj Britaniji (London, Bristol, Njukasl, Liverpul). Svoje počasne konzule Crna Gora će postaviti i na Malti, u SAD-u, Belgiji, Norveškoj, Švedskoj, Monaku, Nizozemskoj, Madagaskaru, Južnoafričkoj Republici, Brazilu, Španiji, Rumuniji, Argentini, Grčkoj, Njemačkoj, Kanadi, Egiptu i Libiji. Takođe bilježimo pokušaj osnivanja počasnog konzulata u Kalkuti ali crnogorska vlada nije imala interes za njegovim otvaranjem.

*Evgenije Popović generalni konzul
Crne Gore u Rimu*

Sa ovako postavljenom mrežom konzularnih predstavništava, Crna Gora je širila svoj uticaj i prestiž u svijetu. Postavljenje u čin počasnog konzula bilo je na obostrani interes, jer Crna Gora je dobijala predstavnika u nekoj zemlji, a nosioci te titule dobijali su pristup najvišim krugovima u svom društvu, što su mnogi iskoristili za proširivanje svojih poslovnih veza. Najbolji primjer toga je crnogorski počasni konzul u Rio de Žaneiru Antonio Januci, veliki investitor i građevinar, kome je položaj počasnog konzula pomogao da ostvari svoju viziju izgradnje centra Rio de Žaneira.

*Antonio Januzzi
počasni konzul Crne Gore u Rio de Ženeiru*

Isto tako, veliko ime u poslovnom svijetu tog doba bio je crnogorski počasni konzul u Parizu, Pol Melon. Vrijedi istaći da su svi ljudi, koji su imenovani u ovo zvanje, izuzetno prilježno radili svoj posao i aktivno zastupali interes Crne Gore u zemljama u kojim su bili postavljeni. O tome svjedoči veliki broj dopisa i drugih dokumenata koje su redovno slali crnogorskom Ministarstvu inostranih djela. Među tim dokumentima mogu se naći razni izvještaji o politici, stavovima tih zemalja, njihovoј ekonomiji, trgovini, ukupnom stanju. Tu su i pres klipinzi članaka o Crnoj Gori, njenom vladaru i drugim važnim temama, dokumenta o konzularnim poslovima i crnogorskim državljanima u tim zemljama. Konzuli su posebno dostavljali izvještaje o pojavi zaraznih bolesti kod ljudi i životinja i otvaranju karantina u lukama. Takođe veći dio počasnih konzula je bio angažovan na humanitarnom radu u Crnoj Gori, posebno na izgradnji Dječije bolnice na Cetinju.

*John Roper Parkington generalni konzul
Crne Gore u Londonu*

Imajući u vidu količinu arhivskog materijala koji je pohranjen u fondu Ministarstva inostranih djela, a svjedoči o aktivnostima počasnih konzula Crne Gore, odlučili smo se da jedan dio prikažemo našoj naučnoj i laičkoj javnosti. Ovim se samo načinje priča o njima koja svakako zahtijeva veće i sveobuhvatnije istraživanje. U tu svrhu izdvojili smo 230 dokumenata i fotografija koje svjedoče o radu konzularnih predstavnika Crne Gore u svijetu. Ova dokumenta pokrivaju počasne konzule u 22 zemlje i njihovu djelatnost u periodu od 1880. godine do 1914. godine. Iako je Crna Gora tokom Prvog svjetskog rata otvorila još nekoliko svojih konzulata, poput onih u Liverpulu i Njukasu, te treću ambasadu u Vašingtonu, mi smo se zaustavili na 1914. godinu jer je prikupljeni materijal dosta premašivao okvire izložbe. Osnovni cilj, kao autora, bio nam je da prikažemo kompletну mrežu počasnih konzularnih predstavništava Crne Gore u inostranstvu i ljudi koji su obavljali te dužnosti. Zato se dosta dokumenata odnosi na postavljenja na mjesto počasnog konzula. Pored toga, pokušali smo da prikažemo njihov rad kroz izvještaje i drugu korespondenciju sa Ministarstvom inostranih djela Crne Gore. Posebno su interesantni izvještaji o trgovini i pomorskom saobraćaju toga doba u pojedinim zemljama, poput Malte, Španije, ili u pojedinim lukama, Italije, Francuske, Velike Britanije.

Počasni konzul iz Rio de Ženeira poslaće crnogorskom MID-u kompletну knjigu o spoljnoj trgovini Brazila i pomorskom saobraćaju te zemlje. Takođe, u svojim izvještajima poslaće statistiku industrije i zapošljenosti Brazila, što su svakako vrijedna dokumenta za dalje proučavanje. Kroz djelatnost počasnih konzula ogledaju se i neki pravci spoljne politike Crne Gore i odnosa drugih država prema njoj. Veliki broj otvorenih konzulata u Italiji i Francuskoj svjedoči o vezanosti Crne Gore za te zemlje i njihova tržišta. Nepostojanje konzularnog predstavništva u Rusiji, samo je znak specijalnih odnosa sa tom zemljom i njenog pokroviteljstva nad Crnom Gorom. Ruski diplomatski predstavnici zastupaće interes Crne Gore u Argentini i Sjedinjenim Američkim Državama.

Jedino je Austro-Ugarska, kao neposredni susjed, uslovila otvaranje počasnog konzulata u Trstu, jako važne luke za crnogorsku trgovinu, sa diplomatskim principom reciprociteta i tražila je otvaranje njenog konzulata u Podgorici. Zbog toga, uspostavljanje konzularnog predstavništva u Trstu trajalo je više od deceniju. Otvaranje pojedinih konzularnih predstavništava nailazilo je na otpor diplomatija drugih zemalja. Tako, uspostavljanje konzulata u Rumuniji, prati protivljenje i negativna kampanja od strane Srbije, protiv postavljanja Maksimilijana Zermana na tu dužnost. Specifične diplomatske odnose Crna Gora je imala sa Sjedinjenim Američkim Državama. Zbog velikog broja iseljenika u tu zemlju, bilo je od velike važnosti da se otvorí konzularno predstavništvo, pa čak je izabrana i podesna ličnost za tu funkciju. Ali, Rusija je svojom intervencijom na dvoru na Cetinju preuzeila da njena ambasada u Vašingtonu zastupa interes Crne Gore u SAD-u. Pojedini počasni konzulati su otvoreni i bez nekog velikog interesa Crne Gore za predstavništvom u toj zemlji. To se posebno odnosi na konzulate u Kristianiji (današnji Oslo) i Štokholmu, gdje su određeni ugledni ljudi pisali crnogorskom MID-u i tražili titulu počasnog konzula. Crnogorska vlada udovoljavala je takvim zahtjevima i proizvodila ljude u čin počasnog konzula. To se pokazalo kao dobar potez jer je tokom Balkanskih ratova značajna pomoć dolazila preko ovih zastupništava, čak i iz Dominikanske republike. Ovakvi podaci nam govore da je uspostavljanje počasnih konzulata bilo na obostranu korist. Crna Gora je time granala svoju diplomatsku mrežu a ljudi koji su je zastupali, kao diplomatski predstavnici jedne zemlje, dobijali su pristup najvišim krugovima u toj zemlji. Zbog toga, veliki broj počasnih konzula Crne Gore dolazio je iz svijeta trgovine i poslovnih krugova. Otvaranje konzulata pratilo je i interes naše dijaspore, pa tako imamo zabilježen zahtjev Crnogoraca iz Kaira da se u Egiptu otvorí konzulat. Početkom XX vijeka, Crna Gora ima dobre veze sa ovom afričkom zemljom, naročito u trgovini, gdje se izvoze poljoprivredni proizvodi, meso i koža. O pojedinim počasnim konzulatima nemamo mnogo podataka, sem datuma otvaranja i imena vršioca te dužnosti. Takvi su konzulati u Kanadi i Južnoj Africi.

Tema o počasnim konzulima Knjaževine/Kraljevine Crne Gore ostala je dosta slabo obrađena u našoj istoriografiji. Iako u fondovima Državnog arhiva ima znatan broj dokumenata koji se odnose na njihovu djelatnost i ulogu u širenju ugleda Crne Gore u svijetu, još uvjek nemamo studiju koja bi se pozabavila ovom problematikom. S obzirom na razgranatost mreže crnogorskih počasnih konzulata, koja se protezala na četiri kontinenta, kao i značaja ljudi koji obavljali te dužnosti u svojim zemljama, ovo je tema koja zaslужuje da joj se posveti dosta pažnja. Naš cilj je bio da kroz ovu izložbu ukažemo na vrijednost dokumenata koji se čuvaju u Državnom arhivu Crne Gore, a koji se odnose na počasne konzule. Takođe, htjeli smo da usmjerimo pažnju, prije svega naučne javnosti u Crnoj Gori, na pitanje počasnih konzula kako bi dobili odgovarajuće mjesto u crnogorskoj istoriji. Rad ovih ljudi na promovisanju Crne Gore i podizanju njenog ugleda u svijetu je velik i zato nam prispada dužnost da im se na najbolji način odužimo i da ih izvučemo iz istorijske anonimnosti. Njihova djelatnost doprinijela je i ekonomskom boljstvu Crne Gore kroz podizanje njene trgovine u brojnim prometnim lukama, uređenju i sigurnosti mnogih naših iseljenika pred vlastima tih zemalja, a tu je i humanitarni aspekt njihovog angažmana. Sve ovo čini da kroz ovu izložbu, kao naučno-popularnu formu, skrenemo pažnju i ukažemo na važnost ove teme u našoj istoriji. Prikazivanjem samo malog fragmenta od sačuvane arhivske građe o počasnim konzulima pokušali smo da otrgnemo od zaborava jedan bitan segment crnogorske istorije koji zavrjeđuje posebno mjesto i pažnju. Zato se nadamo da će ova izložba pobuditi dalje naučno interesovanje za ovu temu kako bi ona bila adekvatno obrađena u našoj istorijskoj nauci.

"The history of diplomacy and diplomatic relations has always been the focus of scientific historiography. The foreign policy of a country was the foundation of research and narrative of its history. It wasn't until recently that a historical science in its studies placed emphasis on cultural and social issues. This, of course, does not mean that the study of diplomatic history has been abandoned and that it still cannot attract the attention of the scientific, and especially the lay audience. The significance of the topic shall remain the core interest of historians and other researchers of the past, but the study and results should be adapted to the modern reader and his understanding of the past.

Just like in another places, the history of diplomacy and foreign policy of Montenegro were in the focus of interest of national historiography. In that sense, it is sometimes impossible to separate the general from the diplomatic history.¹ This is the reason why there are numerous authors and works that have dealt with the foreign policy of Montenegro. The studies of diplomatic history, through various periods of our past, have shown that this extremely important issue is also very complicated. Through different epochs of its existence, Montenegro has changed its state borders, frameworks and met many neighbors. At the same time, the nature and tasks of its foreign policy changed. However, in all these periods, as the unique and primary goal of Montenegrin diplomacy, the task of preserving the state and people's independence and originality was imposed, as an expression of general policy.

Over time, and depending on the state-legal and international position of Montenegro, the bearers and implementers of its foreign policy have changed. In the beginning, it was the rulers of Duklja and Zeta or their representatives who maintained relations with foreign courts. During the Middle Ages, Montenegrin princes, kings and rulers made significant diplomatic connections through marriages with the ruling dynasties of other countries and the families of prominent nobles. As a result, the Montenegrin state and its ruling house raised their reputation and importance on the international scene. The aim of such a diplomacy was to strengthen Duklja or Zeta and firmly position itself on the map of Europe at that point. With the fall of our medieval state, the Montenegrin people found themselves in a position to defend their freedom in centuries of struggle with the Ottoman Empire, territorially limited to the four nahijas that make up the Old Montenegro and the surrounding hills.

The Montenegrin National Assembly, as the only organ of tribal power, maintained contacts and diplomatic relations with other countries, mostly with Venice, the Italian states and the Habsburg Monarchy, in order to position and present itself as an inevitable factor in the fight against the Ottoman Empire. As a result, in the first half of the 17th century, we evidence the case of the Montenegrin delegation at the Spanish court with the aim of negotiating the allied relations.²

With the coming to power in Montenegro of the Petrović Njegoš dynasty, at the end of the 17th century, the institutions and state-building awareness of Montenegrins began to strengthen. This strengthened diplomatic relations with neighbors and established close relations with Russia, which became the backbone of Montenegrin foreign policy in the coming period. All the bishops from the Petrović dynasty, from Bishop Danilo to Peter II, have been firmly attached to Russia, as the protector of Montenegrin independence and the patron of its authorities. In addition, in order to preserve its conditional independence, Montenegro maintained diplomatic relations with the surrounding Turkish feudal rulers and with the Venetian Republic and Austria. The contemporary historical science marked such diplomatic relations that were established as ad hoc diplomacy, because at that time in Montenegro there were no official bodies in charge of foreign policy.³ This type of diplomacy was conducted by occasional and purposeful delegations, which had an aim to negotiate with European courts on specific tasks and needs.

This situation will remain unchanged until the full international recognition and renewal of sovereignty at the Berlin Congress on July 13, 1878. After that, Montenegro, as a recognized state, established its Ministry of Foreign Affairs and legal diplomatic relations with other states. Accordingly, in the period from 1878 to 1914, France, Great Britain, Russia, Turkey, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Serbia, Bulgaria, Germany, Italy opened their diplomatic missions in Cetinje, while the United States had a representative on a non-resident basis. In addition, Turkey, Italy and Austria-Hungary had their consular offices in Podgorica and Bar. Montenegro has found it difficult to develop its own diplomatic network, due to the lack of funds to support it, but also the lack of adequate human resources. Driven by the priority needs, Montenegro opened its embassies in Istanbul and Belgrade, and consular offices in Kotor, Shkodra, Rome, Trieste, and during the First World War, the Montenegrin government opened a consulate first in New York, and then in Washington and Paris.

This is the beginning of the modern Montenegrin diplomacy. The Montenegrin diplomacy is an exception in this period as well.

Recognizing the difficult position of Montenegro and its limitations, the great powers and other countries have opened their legations despite the violated principle of reciprocity between the countries according to which the diplomatic service is regulated.

Montenegro seeks to compensate for the lack of a full and developed diplomatic network by establishing an institution of honorary consuls. In order to consolidate its position in the world and represent its economic and trade interests with a certain country, Montenegro appointed many prominent people in those countries, often in several cities, as its honorary consuls. Most of them were business people, representatives or members of trading companies or sea captains, and we also evidence the presence of people from the art world (painters, sculptors, writers) performing this position. Their mission was to perform administrative tasks for the needs of the Montenegrin government, to represent Montenegrin citizens in those countries and to submit reports of importance for Montenegrin trade or other, especially political issues. In this sense, Montenegro had a fairly extensive network of honorary consuls and its interests were represented in almost all major trade centers in the world at that time. From 1886, when the first honorary consuls were appointed in Bari, Naples and Catania, this network was constantly upgraded until 1914 with the establishment of new consulates. That is why Montenegro had representatives of its interests on four continents, except Asia and Australia, and a total of 42 cities. Montenegro appointed the most honorary consuls in Italy, a total of 12 in Rome, Bari, Milan, Turin, Genoa, Naples, Catania, Venice, Brindisi, Bologna, Massa Carrara, Bordigeri and Palermo.

This speaks of a great trade and other connection between the two countries.

As much as Montenegro was tied to Russia in many aspect, in the sphere of diplomacy it was predominantly relying on Italy. The Italian consul represented the Montenegrin interests in Madagascar, and the Italians were also Montenegrin consuls in Rio de Janeiro, Bahia and San Sebastian. According to the extensive consular network, after Italy, Montenegro had the largest network in France (Paris, Marseille, Bordeaux, Le Havre and Nice), and in Great Britain (London, Bristol, Newcastle, Liverpool). Montenegro also appointed its honorary consuls in Malta, USA, Belgium, Norway, Sweden, Monaco, Netherlands, Madagascar, South Africa Republic, Brazil, Spain, Romania, Argentina, Greece, Germany, Canada, Egypt and Libya. It is also noted the attempt to establish a honorary consulate in Calcutta but the Montenegrin government had no interest in its opening.

With such a network of consular missions, Montenegro expanded its influence and prestige in the world. The appointment to the rank of honorary consuls was of mutual interest, because Montenegro received a representative in a country, and the holders of that title gained access to the highest circles in their society, which many used to expand their business relations. The best example of this was the Montenegrin honorary consul in Rio de Janeiro, Antonio Januci, a major investor and builder, whose position as honorary consul helped him implement his vision of building the centre of Rio de Janeiro.

*Antonio Januzzi
Honorary Consul of Montenegro in Rio de Janeiro*

In addition, a big name in the business world of that time was the Montenegrin Honorary Consul in Paris, Paul Melon. It is worth noting that all the people who were appointed to this title did their job extremely diligently and actively represent the interests of Montenegro in the countries in which they were appointed. This is evidenced by a large number of letters and other documents that they regularly sent to the Montenegrin Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Among these documents there can be found various reports on the policy, attitudes of these countries, their economy, trade, overall situation. There are also press clippings of articles on Montenegro, its ruler and other important topics, documents on consular affairs and Montenegrin citizens in those countries. In particular, the consuls submitted reports on the occurrence of infectious diseases in humans and animals and the opening of quarantine in ports. Also, most of the honorary consuls were engaged in humanitarian work in Montenegro, especially in the construction of the Children's Hospital in Cetinje.

Having in mind the amount of archival material stored in the fund of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, testifying about the activities of honorary consuls of Montenegro, we decided to present one part to our scientific and lay audience. This is just a story about them, which certainly requires more and more comprehensive research. For this purpose, we have selected 230 documents and photographs that testify about the work of consular representatives of Montenegro in the world. These documents cover honorary consuls in 22 countries and their activities in the period from 1880 to 1914. Although Montenegro opened several more consulates during the First World War, such as those in Liverpool and Newcastle, and the third embassy in Washington, we stopped in 1914 because the material collected far exceeded the scope of the exhibition. Our main goal, as the authors, was to present the complete network of honorary consular missions of Montenegro abroad and the people who performed those duties.

That is why a lot of documents refer to appointments to the position of honorary consuls. In addition, we tried to present their work through reports and other correspondence with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Montenegro. In particular, the most interesting are the reports on trade and maritime transport of that time in some countries, such as Malta, Spain, or in some ports, Italy, France and Great Britain.

The Honorary consul from Rio de Janeiro sent a complete book to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Brazil's foreign trade and maritime transport. He also sent in his reports the statistics on industry and employment in Brazil, which are certainly valuable documents for further study. Through the activity of honorary consuls, some directions of the foreign policy of Montenegro and the relations of others towards the state are reflected. A large number of opened consulates in Italy and France testify about Montenegro's commitment to these countries and their markets. The lack of a consular office in Russia is just a sign of special relations with that country and its patronage over Montenegro. Russian diplomatic representatives represented the Montenegro's interests in Argentina and the United States.

Only Austro-Hungary, as an immediate neighbor, conditioned the opening of the honorary consulate in Trieste, a very important port for Montenegrin trade, with a diplomatic principle of reciprocity, and opening of its consulate in Podgorica. Therefore, the establishment of a consular office in Trieste lasted more than a decade. The opening of some consular offices encountered resistance to the diplomacy of other countries. Thus, the establishment of a consulate in Romania is accompanied by opposition and a negative campaign by Serbia, against the appointment of Maximilian Zerman to that position. Montenegro had specific diplomatic relations with the United States.

Because of the large number of emigrants to that country, it was of great importance to open a consular office and the appropriate person was selected for the position. But, with the intervention of Russia at the court in Cetinje it undertook that its embassy in Washington represents Montenegro's interests in the United States. Some honorary consulates were open without any great interest of Montenegro for representation in that country. This is especially true for consulates in Christiania (present-day Oslo) and Stockholm, where certain respectable people wrote to the Montenegrin Ministry of Foreign Affairs and asked for the title of honorary consul. The Montenegrin government complied with such demands and entitled people into the rank of honorary consuls. This proved to be a good move because it is during the Balkans wars that significant aid came through these agencies, even from the Dominican Republic. This kind of data tells us that the establishment of honorary consulates was on mutual benefit. Montenegro has thus expanded its diplomatic network and the people who represented it, as diplomatic representatives in their countries gained an access to its highest circles. Due to that, a large number of honorary consuls of Montenegro came from the world of trade and business circles. The opening of the consulate was in line with the interests of our diaspora, subsequently we have recorded the request of Montenegrins from Cairo to open a consulate in Egypt. At the beginning of the 20th century, Montenegro had good relations with this African country, especially in trade, where agricultural products, meat and leather were exported. We do not have much information about individual honorary consulates, except for the date of opening and the name of the incumbent. Such are the consulates in Canada and South Africa.

The subject of honorary consuls of the Principality / Kingdom of Montenegro has remained rather poorly covered in our historiography. Although the funds of the State Archives have a significant number of documents related to their activities and role in spreading the reputation of Montenegro in the world, we still do not have a study that would address this issue.

Given the extensive network of Montenegrin honorary consulates, which stretched across four continents, as well as the importance of the people who performed those duties in their countries, this is a topic that deserves worthy attention. Our goal was to point out through this exhibition the value of documents kept in the State Archives of Montenegro, which relate to honorary consuls. Also, we wanted to direct the attention, primarily of the scientific public in Montenegro, to the issue of honorary consuls in order to get an appropriate place in Montenegrin history. The work of these people on the promotion of Montenegro and raising its reputation in the world is great and that is why we have a duty to compensate them in the best possible way and to get them out of historical anonymity. Their activity has also contributed to the economic well-being of Montenegro through the increase of its trade in numerous transport ports, the organization and security of many of our emigrants before the authorities of those countries, and there is also the humanitarian aspect of their activism. As a result, the exhibition, as a popular science form, will draw our attention and point out the importance of this topic in our history. By showing only a small fragment of the preserved archives of honorary consuls, we have made an attempt to preserve them from oblivion as an important segment of Montenegrin history that deserves a special place and attention. Therefore, we hope that this exhibition will arouse further scientific interest in this topic so that it would be properly addressed in our historical science.
